Meet Miss Emily!

Emily Warren is the new Literacy Outreach Coordinator for the Stayton Public Library Foundation. Emily is a senior at Oregon State University studying Human Development and Family Science. She has worked for the Stayton Public Library for the past five years. Emily brings with her a love of children's literature, cheerful energy, and silly stories and songs that make her a huge hit with children! Emily considers serving the children in our community and understanding their needs to be the highlight of her job!

Leap

science
— Engineered by —
THE FRANKLIN INSTITUTE

This year, the Early Literacy Outreach Program joined the Leap Into Science network. Developed by The Franklin Institute, Leap into Science is a nationwide program that integrates open-ended science activities with children's books, designed for children ages 3-10 and their families. Specifically designed for community settings, this evidence-based program seeks to engage underserved audiences in accessible and familiar settings, like the local library. We are proud to report that Miss Emily has already helped host these workshops throughout this summer and will continue throughout the school year, including during National Leap Into Science Week in February 2020. The SPLF is thrilled to be part of this initiative, furthering both literacy and science in our community.

Looking back...

Father Daughter Ball 2019

The 7th Annual Father Daughter Ball was a beautiful evening of fun and memory making! 250 fathers and daughters filled the NSSD Stayton High School Field House with laughter, dancing, and beaming smiles. Young Mobile Entertainment provided the music, lights, and incredible ambiance with all the latest sing-along songs and groovy tunes.

Volunteers worked tirelessly to transform the field house into an Arabian Night - themed extravaganza, complete with an enormous dessert tent, camels, magic carpets, and genie lamps. Princess Jasmine appeared and stayed to dance the evening away.

Dads and Daughters enjoyed delicious snacks and beverages generously provided by Trexler Farm. Each young lady was gifted a librarian-selected, age appropriate book, thanks to the Stayton Friends of the Library.

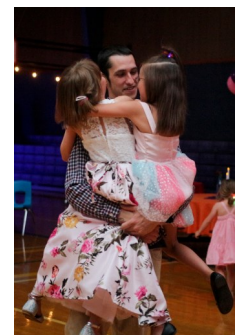

The event was co-hosted by The Stayton Public Library Foundation and The Santiam Teen Center. Proceeds were shared by these two impactful, local non-profits! Of course, the event would not have been possible without the incredible financial support from our local sponsors.

Address Service Requested

A fond farewell!

It is with sincere gratitude that the Stayton Public Library Foundation accepted the resignation of Josh Hardage from the Board of Directors after 7 years of service. Josh was instrumental in the creation of the Santiam Canyon Father Daughter Ball, our largest annual fundraiser, which it has grown beyond our imaginations! Thank you, Josh, for working hard to make the Stayton Public Library Foundation and our library a better place!
